Areas A-E
Review core and other requirements in undergraduate catalog - catalog.gsu.edu

Area F
Review core and other requirements in undergraduate catalog. If considering this major, take JOUR 1000 to explore this option before making a decision.

Area G
You must have a GPA of 2.5 in your Area F JOUR courses to be eligible for the major.

Complete journalism core courses.

Meet with your sophomore advisor in the University Advisement Center - advisement.gsu.edu

Pick up a copy of the “Survival Guide” from the department and participate in an activity that enables you to meet faculty, students, and staff from your major.

Take advantage of the research resources, Arab-US Association for Communication Educators and Center for International Media Education.

Volunteer for Georgia State’s Student Media: GSTV, Rampway-on-line, The Signal, WRAS-FM.

Join student chapter of Society of Professional Journalists or the Public Relations Student Society of America.

Attend an Atlanta Press Club event about international reporting.

Discuss careers and graduate or professional study with the department advisor and Career Services.

Attend the Student Career Workshop hosted by the Atlanta chapter of the Asian-American Journalists Association.

Participate in campus and other leadership programs.

Meet with your senior advisor in the University Advisement Center.

Meet with the department undergraduate director:

Area of focus:

Earn academic credit at an internship. This is an excellent opportunity to network for post-graduation employment.

Review school offerings using Princeton Review or other online resource.

Attend the World Media Forum hosted by CIME.

Try improving your language skills so you can interview people who are not fluent in English.

Visit University Career Services.

career.gsu.edu

© College of Arts & Sciences, Georgia State University (Updated 6/13)

Department of Communication | Location: 6th Floor, One Park Place South | Phone: (404) 413-5600 | www.communication.gsu.edu